

On completion of this weeks Mothers Day handicap event, the number of members who need to complete 5 handicap events to be eligible to win the 2023 Handicap trophy has been whittled down to 44 members.

Currently there are only two members who have run the five races, the amazing Rochelle Airey, member 843, and the main man himself, the handicapper Tristan Bell.

However, there is a stampede of members with four events under their belt, breathing down their necks, and both Rochelle and Tristan are fully aware that it would take a monumental effort, (or some crafty handicapping) to keep ahead of the pack.

The regular stalwarts of the handicap trophy, Peter March, Julie Wilson and Jason Kell are all within reach of the summit, with four runs each, though a special mention needs to go to Rodney Glossop, last year's trophy winner and his wife Crystal.

Not only has Rodney powered to an impressive top 10 finish in 3 of his four events, he has forgone his own personal glory by allowing his wife, Crystal Glossop to finish ahead of him in every handicap race, and currently is 39 places behind her. (Love to be a fly on the wall in that household at the end of the season....)

With three events left in the handicap trophy calendar, this is where the fun and tactics come into play. By competing in the handicap race every member can determine the finishing position of those at the top of the leader board.

Bring on Carine on 25th June.

See you all there
